We need to reduce carbon emissions in order to give both the planet, and future generations, a fighting chance. There is a compromise with industry in this and this is what Ursula von der Leyen tried to present, but it's not ambitious enough."

Martin Schirdewan interview: A fighting chance

We must secure the future of British farming, to lessen the chances of food shortages in the UK and around the world, whilst improving the soil and biodiversity standards. We cry and shed tears when the Amazon faces deforestation, when Australia is burning - our empathy must remain intact when it is the UK facing these issues.
