As Judy Gruen walked down the aisle and into her Orthodox Jewish future, her bouquet quivered in her shaky hand. Having grown up in the zeitgeist that proclaimed, “ If it feels good, do it, ” was she really ready to live the life of “ rituals, rules, and restraints ” that the Torah prescribed? The Skeptic and the Rabbi is a rare memoir with historical depth, spirituality, and intelligent humor. Gruen speaks with refreshing honesty about what it means to remain authentic to yourself while charting a new yet ancient spiritual path at odds with the surrounding culture, and writes touchingly about her family, including her two sets of grandparents, who influenced her in wildly opposite ways. As she navigates her new life with the man she loves and the faith she also loves—surviving several awkward moments, including when the rabbi calls to tell her that she accidentally served unkosher food to her Shabbat guests—Gruen brings the reader right along for the ride. Reading this wry, bold and compelling memoir, you “ ll laugh, you “ ll cry, and when you “ re finished, you may also have a sudden craving for chicken matzo ball soup—kosher, of course.

“ I had my fat tested today. It came back positive. ” Facing this inescapable observation, Judy Gruen set out to lose fifteen pounds in time for a college reunion. But as she discovered, no two diet “ experts ” agree on anything, even whether lentils are good for people with Type A blood. Originally published as Till We Eat Again: Confessions of a Diet Dropout, this newly revised and updated edition, Till We Eat Again: A Second Helping, remains a classic and hilarious chronicle of one woman’s real-life attempt to make sense out of diets named “ Bad Carbohydrates and the Women Who Love Them, ” and compounds like “ Hyper-Meta-Phedra-Bolic, ” which may boost metabolism but also might cause cardiac arrest.During her quest for thinness, Judy also belly dances to the “ camel, ” runs laps while an Army major blows his whistle at a fitness boot camp, and gets tangled in yoga positions so bizarre the paramedics need the “ Jaws of Life ” to get her out. She also tries to avoid diet despair as medical researchers conclude that even drinking too much water can kill you. After months of these and other indignities, she’ll even earn a little star from Weight Watchers for losing five pounds. This book offers equal measures of comedy and inspiration for anyone who wants to lose five or fifty pounds. “ I laughed out loud because this book is so funny and so true. I loved it! Judy’s witty takeaway on diet scams is hysterical, and that detoxsection...I was ROTFL! ” – Jennifer Cohen, author and founder of No Gym Required, fitness spokesperson, Weight Watchers “ Who among us has not felt terror upon hearing the words, ‘Reunion coming up!’ Fortunately, Judy Gruen’s terror is tastier than a Twinkieand half the calories. Come to think of it, ZERO calories. So indulgel! ” – Lenore Skanazy, author of the book and blog, Free-Range Kids; host ofDiscovery/TLC International’s World’s Worst Mom “ If I had to get dragged to the gym, I’d want to pull up my mat next to Judy Gruen. She dreams of donuts during biop curbs! Who can’t relate to that? ” – Celia Riverbark, author of the New York Times bestseller, You Don’t Sweat Much for a Fat Girl! “ Judy Gruen has found the funny in dropping those stubborn pounds and lightly saut é ed it into a deliciously fun book. Go ahead and pile on agenerous helping! ” – Jan Singer, author of You’re a Good Mom (and Your Kids Aren’t So Bad Either); founder of MommsSaid.net

The best in strategic management from today’s top strategic thinkers at leading business schools. From tackling issues of corporate, business, and global strategy to analyzing industrial, technological, and organizational factors, this book defines the current terms involved and offers practical suggestions for implementing them.

Foreword by Tom Peters Internationally known management consultants Nicholas Imperato and Oren Harari connect the big picture of our changing civilizations with the specific practical actions that managers have to take to produce results today. All organizations are faced with the same challenge: the need to jump the curve to make significant, discontinuous leaps in their thinking, whether about product, technology, or management style. The alternative to follow current practices all the way to their inevitable decline is unacceptable. The authors show us that it is also unnecessary. Drawing on numerous personal interviews with innovative leaders around the world, as well as research and first-hand observation, Imperato and Harari identify the four strategic imperatives--innovation, intelligence, coherence, and responsibility--that will enable companies to successfully jump the curve and thrive in the emerging epoch. And they show how cutting-edge companies and leaders are translating these imperatives into action. Not since the dawn of the Modern Age some five hundred years ago has civilization undergone the kind of profound, rapid-fire changes we’re experiencing today. Even organizations that are adapting, growing and innovating have the gnawing sense that obsolescence is right around the corner. Jumping the Curve offers perspective and guidance for doing business at this unique moment in time. It connects the big picture of our changing world with the practical actions managers must take now to position their organizations for success in a new epoch we can’t yet fully see or understand.
