This text also shows the means and ends in nonviolence, including confronting some criticisms, preventive nonviolence and noncooperation in foreign policy, and peace. This book represents an instance of the explicit injection of values into social science. Show less. The Psychology of Nonviolence explores in a psychological perspective the meaning of nonviolence, particularly its philosophy, strategy, and implications.

Peace psychology is a subfield of psychology and peace research that deals with the psychological aspects of peace, conflict, violence, and war. Peace psychology can be characterized by four interconnected pillars: (1) research, (2) education, (3) practice, and (4) advocacy. The first pillar, research, is documented most extensively in this article.

The Center was born when Abu Bakr, an in-house university training specialist, and Charles Collyer, Chair of the Psychology Department, inspired by a Kingian Nonviolence training they had participated in, decided to pursue the possibility of creating a Center for Nonviolence & Peace Studies at URI. The nonviolence trainers who introduced them into these ideas were Dr. Bernard LaFayette, Jr., who had been a member of Martin Luther King's staff, and his co-trainer Captain Charles Alphin.
